

oikos-PRME Research Hub

Call for Contributions

Choosing a topic and writing a thesis is a very important moment in a student life. It is also a unique opportunity to take the driving seat in defining our own curricula and influence the research agenda of university institutions. With the common objective to integrate sustainability into education by leveraging on the enthusiasm, critical thinking and innovation of students when writing a thesis, oikos and PRME have recently teamed up to jointly promote the oikos-PRME Research Hub.

The oikos-PRME Research Hub is a unique platform for students in economics and management at all levels (Bachelor, Master and PhD) to share research on sustainability-related topics within and beyond the oikos and PRME's communities. The goal is clear: to encourage more and more students worldwide to write theses that address the sustainability challenges of our time.

How to participate

You can share your own research by visiting the Research Hub platform (<https://oikos-international.org/programmes/oikos-prme-research-hub/>) and submitting the abstract and a description of your work, as well as your short biography and picture. You will then be contacted by the oikos team with a preview of your Research Hub profile and page. You can decide to share your full thesis or make it available upon request. In any case, you will retain the full ownership of your work and be able to modify your page whenever you like. For more information, please contact us at researchhub@oikos-international.org.

Are you a professor in economics or management? You can contribute to the project by inviting your students to undertake sustainability-related research and share their theses and experience through the Research Hub!

About oikos

oikos is an international student-driven organisation for sustainability in economics and management. Founded in 1987 at the University of St. Gallen, Switzerland, oikos comprises today more than 45 chapters at universities worldwide with one joint mission: to integrate sustainability into education and research.

About PRME

The Principles for Responsible Management Education (PRME) is the UN Global Compact's initiative to transform management education, research and thought leadership globally by providing the Principles for Responsible Management Education framework, developing learning communities and promoting awareness about the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals. Since its official launch in 2007 by UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, the PRME initiative has grown to more than 650 leading business schools and management-related academic institutions from over 85 countries across the world.
